Poet Meets Poet

d'Annunzio Vs. Carducci

BOLOGNA (ITM)—Among the records of Augusto Majani, an artist who died recently at the age of 92, an amusing account has been found of a social gathering arranged in 1901 by the "Resto del Carlino," Bologna's famous newspaper, in order to bring d'Annunzio and Carducci together.

Gabriel the Magnificent who had come to Bologna to read his new "Canzone di Garibaldi" to a packed theater of admirers, was seated at the dinner which followed next to the crochety old dean of Italian letters and did his best to charm him. He began by pointing out to Carducci how: "in spite of all the stories circulating on my depraved and luxurious life, I drink only water." That was a bad beginning. Without lifting his face from his plate, Carducci muttered into his beard: "and I only wine."

d'Annunzio tried a new gambit, and turned to literature: how did Carducci judge this new book "Quo Vadis?" which everyone was talking about? Was it not worthy of its great success?

Carducci, who was tackling a goose wing, mumbled: "A success for the arenas," and would say no more.

When the fruit came around, d'Annunzio tried again: he peeled an apple and handed it to Carducci saying with a probable reference to the Garden of the Hesperides: "Maestro, permettemi di offrirvi il pomo dell'aurora" (permit me to offer you the fruit of dawn). This time Carducci looked up, gazed lengthily at the fruit and finally exclaimed: "Ella una mela!" (an apple, that's what it is!) But he took it. And with the help of a few more glasses of lambrusco the ice finally melted and the evening ended in song.

Some Views on the Kennedy Immigration Proposal

Says Formula Restrictive Device

An Educator's Views

Here is a copy of a letter which appeared in The New York Times soon after Senator Kennedy announced his "blood relationship" formula for future immigration to the United States. The letter was written by Richard Robbins, Newton, Mass. Robbins is an assistant professor of sociology and anthropology at Wheaton College. He is the co-author of "International Migrations."

The need for a more flexible—and more generous—immigration law remains as important now as at any time in the past. It is therefore encouraging to note in The Times (Feb. 20) that Senator John Kennedy proposes a new immigration bill whose main provision is as narrow and dogmatic as any in the most recent "reform" legislation, the justly criticized McCarran-Walter Act.

The Senator would replace the present national origins quota system. That is a consummation devoutly to be wished, for the quota distribution as now arranged discriminates against peoples from southern and eastern Europe on the dubious ground that over the long run they are less "assimilable" than peoples from northern and western Europe. But at the same time Senator Kennedy would substitute for the national origins formula the rule that only relatives of citizens and resident aliens should be admitted as immigrants.

Idea Challenged

I see no improvement whatever in this idea. I do not think it should be allowed to go unchallenged.

lenged simply because the six other proposals made by Senator Kennedy are useful and sound. Senator Kennedy's "blood relationship formula" is the main piece of business.

Preference for relatives of American citizens and resident aliens is both humane and in the national interest, monopolization of the quota list by blood kin is quite another matter. It stands to reason that a large proportion of annual immigration is going to be taken by relatives in any case.

The principle of a foreigner who succeeds in making a good life for himself in this country, in terms of both privileges and obligations, deserves to have the closest members of his family with him, needs no elaborate defense. Yet why should this principle be carried to the point of denying access altogether to those who do not have blood kin in the United States?

Further, as Senator Kennedy knows perfectly well, the present law, restrictive though it may be,

Explains Details of Proposal

Senator Kennedy's Reply

On March 6 The New York Times carried a letter by Senator Kennedy in reply to the letter written to The Times by the Massachusetts educator, Richard Robbins. The Massachusetts Senator made the following points in his letter to The Times:

A letter to the editor of The New York Times by Richard Robbins, printed in your issue of March 4, has been called to my attention. It is a thoughtful and cogent statement of the undesirability of replacing the rigid national origins quota system in our immigration policy with merely a blood relationship formula. I wholly agree with the basic conclusions expressed by Mr. Robbins.

In so far, however, as he assumes that the bill I am preparing would be limited in the way he describes, he is mistaken. At the press conference called by the Anti-Defamation League to announce the publication of a booklet I wrote entitled "A Nation of Immigrants," I emphasized the point that I planned to introduce a bill to replace the national origins quota system, and that preferred status in immigration would be given to relatives of American residents. But I also stated—and this has been overlooked in many of the comments upon my position—that the bill I was working on would retain provisions for the admission of non-relatives.

The proposal for the elimination of the national origins quotas has two phases: First, it will admit relatives for the purpose of reuniting families that have long suffered from unnatural separation. They will be admitted without the rigid restrictions of the national origins formula which currently imposes tiny unworkable quotas on many countries.

Thus we would reduce the huge backlog of applications by brothers, sisters and other close relatives of American citizens. (It is estimated that currently this backlog exceeds 200,000 relatives who have been waiting for many years.) It would render unnecessary many of the private bills introduced in each session of Congress to ameliorate particular hardship. Finally, the natural desire of members of the same family to help each other would assist the assimilation process.

Second, the proposal would provide for the admission of non-relatives—refugees and so-called "new-seed" immigration—under a flexible formula that would take into account America's needs, our historical position as a home for the persecuted, and our standing as a world leader.

Statistical Formulas

While the statistical formulas to govern the various categories of admission are still to be worked out, at least as many non-relatives as we now admit annually would be eligible for admission under the new program. There would be one important difference—quota limitations based on country of origin would be largely eliminated.

This is one of ten proposals I mentioned at the press conference. It is by far both the most difficult and the most delicate. I am confident, however, that we will ultimately be able to enact a law which is consistent with our position of leadership in the free world.

Editorial Comment

New York Times

Senator Kennedy's seven-point proposal for modification of our immigration laws is a bit like the curate's egg—good in spots. In so far as it does actually make some liberalization of provisions that are too restrictive, it is good. In so far as it would limit immigrants to those who are related to persons already resident in this country it is, like the present laws much too harsh to be in accord with our national spirit.

The Administration's proposal is a better one, and even that could be made more generous. In either case the focus of the legislation needs to be shifted. The Kennedy proposal, in that respect, is a step in the right direction.

The real purpose of a good immigration law should be to permit the entry of those who are desirable, and especially of those who need this place of refuge. It should not be designed to keep out as many as possible, on one pretext or another. The harshness of some of the legislation in the past has been the product of some sort of national panic, some curious xenophobia in reverse, almost an inferiority complex, that ill becomes a great country that has been made great by its immigrants. All of us, indeed, belong in that classification, the moment we begin to look back a bit.

The thing that is most hurtful about harsh legislation, however, is that it puts us in a bad light in many parts of the world, precisely at a time when we aspire to leadership and need prestige. We cannot accomplish our aims if others think that we are timid, selfish, overbearing or "superior." Our immigration laws reflect, in many minds, some of those attitudes, and if this is a misconception it should be corrected by measures more sweeping than that of Senator Kennedy.

Worcester Telegram

It is hard to imagine why Senator John F. Kennedy thinks his new plan for limiting immigration to the United States would be any improvement. Kennedy is proposing a new law which would limit future immigration to the blood relations of those people who are already here.

If one feels that the United States has reached the point where the flow of immigrants must be reduced below the present quota of 154,000 a year, the Kennedy formula would—by his own estimates—open our gates even wider.

If one feels, as many do, that the chief evil in our present immigration rules is the national-origins restriction, the Kennedy plan compounds that defect.

Such a plan could easily bar the immigration of the most deserving and useful. It could easily mean that—because kinship was the only criterion—we had to take in many of the immigrants we wanted least.

If the senator cannot think of a better immigration plan than this one, he ought not to make any proposals in the field.

So Our Readers Will Know

On this page are a number of views on U. S. Sen. John F. Kennedy's proposal to amend the McCarran-Walter Immigration and Naturalization Act. As expected in any controversial issue the views differ. We are carrying these diverse views because OSIA NEWS believes that any proposal to amend existing immigration laws should be given the widest publicity possible. In this manner the membership of the Order Sons of Italy in America will know what is going on and when the time comes for action, the action of the Order will be intelligent and forthright.

OSIA NEWS has no opinion on Kennedy's proposal at this stage. The Order has had no time to fully explore the Kennedy plan to allow "blood-relatives" of American citizens to enter the United States outside the quota system. When the Order sets the policy in this matter, OSIA NEWS will implement this policy. For that is our function. We reflect the opinion of the Order and no other opinion.

The director of OSIA NEWS has written to Senator Kennedy inviting the Senator to discuss his proposal in the columns of our national newspaper. If and when the Massachusetts Senator accepts our offer we will publish what he has to say as part of our policy to keep our members informed on all important issues of the day.

"Do A Better Job of Assimilation"

Sees Humanity Being Served

We welcome back to the pages of OSIA NEWS, Louis Varrichione of Framingham, Mass. Brother Varrichione is no stranger to our readers. While associated with displaced persons' work in Europe, Varrichione wrote a number of articles on post-war Italy. On his return to the United States he continued writing for OSIA NEWS for several years. He coordinated the filming of "Surge et Age," a movie which sparked the Order's national campaign for the establishment of a memorial orphanage at Cassino, Italy.

In this article, Brother Varrichione discusses the Kennedy proposal on changing the existing immigration laws.

LOUIS VARRICHIONE

Word has come out of Washington that U. S. Sen. John F. Kennedy of Massachusetts has proposed that future immigration to the United States be limited to relatives of United States residents.

Senator Kennedy said he plans to introduce a new immigration bill soon to revise the present national origins method of establishing immigration quotas. His measure would provide a formula based upon the blood relationship between citizens and resident aliens already here and those who seek admittance.

In the opinion of this writer, Senator Kennedy has struck a thought provoking note in regard to the immigration question.

As we read between the lines of Senator Kennedy's proposal, we draw some interesting conclusions, and they are:

1. We see the cause of humanity being served in that families would be united—a noble gesture by a great nation dedicated to the service of God and to the maintenance of family life.

2. Our sense of unity would receive additional impetus across our land because of this re-dedication to the preservation of unifying family life.

Remove Barriers

3. This proposal would remove artificial barriers that keep blood kin from enjoying their God-given right to associate, and to seek comfort, security, and strength with each other.

4. This proposal should ease the minds of those of our fellow-Americans who are concerned with the question of assimilating newcomers. Who could do a better job of assimilation than the folks already here when they welcome their loved ones from across the sea? Who could do a better job of counselling the newcomers in seeking work, in establishing their homes, in neighborhood living, in furthering their education, who, but the relatives already here in America. And what great example for the newcomers to see their kin already established here in their homes, in their professions, in our schools, in all walks of American life, second to none.

5. Should the common danger threaten America, who would be the first to rise to her defense, who, but these united families who would have something extra to defend—a way of life, the American Way of Life, if you will, founded on strong, undying family life.

6. The good folk of our country who support good family life believe that when a man has reached the end of his days on this earth and is about to go to meet his God, that a man has the God-given right to be surrounded by his blood-kin; that they should be near and not separated from him because of "man made" laws.

A man about to leave this "vale of tears" should go out "in style," surrounded by his loved ones, praying for his departing soul.

7. Thousands upon thousands of the good folk left behind in the old country and the thousands upon thousands that departed from them in life were never to see each other again.

8. There are countless numbers now living here and across the seas who have already spoken their last goodbyes.

9. Parents, already in America, should not be denied the presence of their children, including those that are adults. These good people, now part of the American scene, still uphold the principle that a man is the head of his family, until he dies. It is a good principle—it is a sound principle and should be strengthened at every turn. These fine old folk derive most of their strength in in general, makes ample provision for relatives. To begin with, spouses and minor children of citizens can be admitted without restriction as to number on a non-quota basis. Within the quota system there is special preference for parents of citizens and priority (within the non-preference category) for spouses and children of resident aliens and brothers, sisters and adult children of citizens. One can even favor further liberalization of family preferences (as I do) without going so far as to exclude those without kinship ties to this country.

Acceptable Bill

No doubt Senator Kennedy seeks to make a virtue of necessity. That is, any new immigration legislation, if it is to have a reasonable chance of passing, must be acceptable to Representative Walter, chairman of the House Immigration subcommittee. Representative Walter is restrictionist in outlook and the "kinship test" is at bottom a restrictionist device. Perhaps the kinship clause will enable Senator Kennedy to get through committee the other useful provisions of his bill.

While I grant that realism and compromise of interest are the essence of the legislative process, in this case I think too much has been conceded at the outset. We should not relinquish the principle that within the necessary quantitative limits of our over-all visa issuance policy we want to welcome nonrelatives as well as relatives.

If this provision had been in effect back in the nineteenth century many people would not be here today. Senator Kennedy included, if I am not mistaken.

New York

Amato Elected At Syracuse

SYRACUSE, N. Y. — Mrs. Joseph Amato has been named venerable of Golden Jubilee Lodge No. 2044.

later life by the presence of their children and grandchildren. They should be helped to come together when they so desire.

Deplores Separation

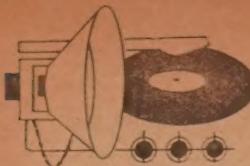

10. Parents overseas should not be artificially kept apart from their children over here.

11. Adult brothers and sisters now overseas should not be kept separated from their adult brothers and sisters now in America if there exists the natural desire for the American residents to want to sponsor their kin for a new life in this country.

Senator Kennedy's immigration proposal radiates with warmth and human kindness. The idea makes sense.

Perhaps it would also make sense if quota number provision for special immigration cases (scientists, technicians, etc.) were to be made outside the regular immigration plan as proposed by Senator Kennedy.

Members of the Order of Sons of Italy reading this message are asked to talk it over with their friends and neighbors. Also talk to folk who have relatives in countries other than Italy. The idea is worthy of sympathetic thought.

RECORDS IN REVIEW

By A. ALFRED MARCELLO

With this edition a new column, RECORDS IN REVIEW, makes its appearance in the pages of OSIA NEWS. This column will be chiefly concerned with a review of new LP records, both monophonic and stereophonic. But periodically we hope to keep our readers posted whenever the hi-fi industry comes up with anything new in equipment.

From time to time a number of our readers have suggested that we carry a column devoted to hi-fi records and equipment. These readers have argued that members of the Order Sons of Italy in America with a traditional love of music would welcome such a column. We are convinced now that there is a great deal of merit to what they say and so this month we take the plunge.

In writing this new column we are returning to our "first love" in our long newspaper career. Before we became city editor we had spent some 10 years as a reviewer of the legitimate theater, the movies and the concert and operatic stage. So we expect to derive much pleasure in reviewing new records as well as discussing hi-fi news.

High-fidelity music or hi-fi as it is more commonly known today, has come a long way since the first long-playing records made their appearance back in the late '40's. Back a few years ago there was some talk about a new dimension in sound—stereophonic music. But no one dreamed at the time that stereo would come so soon or for that matter have such a terrific impact on hi-fi enthusiasts.

New Adventures

But stereo is here and with stereo have come new adventures in music. There is a new and wonderful depth to opera; there is amazing realism to concert music, to light opera and to musicals.

We have been dabbling with stereo since late last summer. This is our hobby, a hobby that has helped a great deal to ease the tensions and stresses that go with an editor's job.

Love of music comes easy with our background of Italian ancestry.

We only hope that we can translate this background into an interesting experience for our readers.

LA GIOCONDA

But now for a discussion of new records. The other day we heard the complete opera of La Gioconda on three L. P. stereo recordings. We had previously heard the monophonic or conventional recording of Ponchielli's opera. Here is an excellent example of vast improvement over the monophonic versions. In the stereo version are featured such stars as Mario del Monaco, Renata Tebaldi, Ugo Savarese and Giulietta Simionata.

These stars put the stage of La Scala right in your living room. It is a thrilling experience. London has done a masterful job of engineering the sound.

L-OSA -1302. Set of three records $17.94.

BACCALONI IN STEREO

Grand Award Records has definitely scored a beat in the new album, BACCALONI. Released in both the monophonic and stereophonic version, this new album marks the great Baccaloni's entry into the popular recording field.

Turin Museum Has Collection Of Automobiles

TURIN (ITM) — In a few months the Automobile Museum in Turin will transfer its collection of over 100 vintage cars to a new seat where they can all finally be displayed to advantage. The kernel of the collection is made up of the cars which Count Biscaretti di Ruffia started putting aside in years when no one imagined that yesterday's discarded model would, some day, warrant an entrance ticket merely to be looked at.

The more precious Turin specimens go back to the years at the turn of the Century when the early Fiats, Panhards and Dion-Boutons first started kicking up the dust on country roads in Italy. Those were the years in which d'Annunzio burst into ecstatic prose on the new delicious sensation of speed (60 km or 37 miles per hour).

The museum, beside its precious protomodels preserves also many cars which made history, such as the open roadster on which Prince Borghese and Luigi Barzini Sr. travelled from Paris to Peking using, at times, a compass over trackless stretches of Siberia.

Another "landmark" car, well remembered by men over 60, is the early Isotta Fraschini with which dowager Queen Margherita, a tireless tourist used to travel. Compact and tall, it would appear almost soaring above its little clouds of dust, like a small water tower on the move.

Letter From Ex-Supreme Venerable

Tribute To DiGiulio

In a letter to the Editor of OSIA NEWS. Ex-Supreme Venerable George J. Spatuzza of Chicago paid personal tribute to the late Palmer DiGiulio of Joliet, Ill.

Spatuzza describes the late head of the Order's Committee on Immigration and Naturalization, as one who loved "the Order to the very extreme and for the triumph of its ideals he worked incessantly."

His letter follows in part:

"I cannot believe that Palmer is no longer in our midst. We were so close that practically not a day went by that we were not in touch with each other, either by phone, mail or in person. He loved the Order to the very extreme and for the triumph of its ideals he worked incessantly. He was one of my close cooperators in the Grand Lodge of Illinois, when I was its Grand Venerable, and in the Supreme Lodge, when I was at the head of the Order."

"The Order has lost a faithful worker and I have lost a dear, very dear friend. He was such an indefatigable worker that when I assigned a task to him I could depend on its successful outcome."

"During his illness he was confined in the hospital, where I visited him often, for nearly two months. I spent a part of Christmas Eve and of New Year's Day with him at the hospital. He no doubt believed that he was on the way to recovery, but Fate decreed otherwise."

To the Editor of OSIA NEWS:

I read with interest the lyrics for the Wearing of the Purple song by Miss Helen Vargon to whom I extend my sincere congratulations.

As soon as I recuperate from a lingering cold I shall comply with your request and desire that someone will write the music.

I suggest that the second part of the lyric (How can we show our gratitude) shall be used as a Refrain or Ritornello to be sung by all in a chorus at any event.

You will hear from me. I think you have already received some encouragement, and I trust that I won't be too late.

To the Editor of OSIA NEWS:

Let me congratulate you on a fine and informative paper. I do hope that every member that gets it not only reads every word of it, but passes it along to a friend (that is how I first became aware of it). And as publicist for District 18, I have often given articles taken from OSIA NEWS to our three local newspapers and it is surprising and indeed most gratifying to hear the very nice comments made by various community people.

I look forward to the first of the month which keeps me supplied with material for good publicity. I do hope that you have a sketch of the new building that will be erected in Washington, D. C., that I could perhaps use locally.

The Perini Story

By ALBERT A. MAINO

The Perini Corporation of Framingham, Mass., one of the largest construction companies in the world, is playing a major role in giving a 'new look' to America's face.

The man largely responsible for the success of this multi-pronged organization is Louis R. Perini, president since 1924 and an honorary member of the Sons of Italy.

The Perini Corporation, a family organization, has been averaging $100 million of construction a year since 1954.

It had its beginning in 1885 when Bonofiglio Perini, an Italian immigrant, landed in New York.

Bonofiglio started in as a laborer working on water supply and highway projects in New York and Massachusetts. In 1890 he settled in Boston where he met and married his wife, Clementina. The growing Perini family (there were 14 children, 10 of whom lived, five boys and five girls) established their home wherever the work was.

Bonofiglio Forms Company

In 1917, Bonofiglio established the construction company B. Perini & Sons, Inc. The boys were growing up. Louis, then 15, like the others had started at the age of six carrying water for the men. When not attending classes, he worked as a laborer, timekeeper, foreman and superintendent.

For the next seven years the company worked highway construction. The company also built the first Federal-aid hot mix, then called Topeka mix, project in Rhode Island, and later the first Federal-aid penetration-type macadam highway in Vermont.

Bonofiglio Perini died in 1924. It was a critical year for the family and the company. They had submitted a low bid of $350,000 on a road job in the vicinity of Lakeville, Mass., the largest single project they had ever tackled. State officials were somewhat reluctant to award the contract to the Perinis because the contract was the largest yet advertised to that time. The Perini boys, Louis, president at 21, Joseph, treasurer at 24, and Fred, 32, convinced the state and a bonding company that they could perform the work. The job was successfully done, and the company has since grown into one of the largest heavy construction companies in the world.

On the Lakeville job, the youngest of the Perini boys, Charles, served as waterboy. He is now vice-president in charge of equipment.

Paving Record

In 1932 the company set a world concrete-paving record. The job was the construction of the Worcester, Mass., Turnpike. In a single eight-hour day, Perini's concrete-paving crew laid over a mile of a 10-foot-wide strip of concrete, 9 inches thick.

The following year the company branched out into the heavy construction industry, building among other projects, the core wall of the Windsor Dam for the Quabbin Reservoir, a water supply for Boston; the Murphy Dam for the New Hampshire Water Resources Board on the Connecticut Lakes; Caleb Mills Saville Dam for the Hartford Water Bureau; Birch Hill Dam in Roylston, Mass., for the U. S. Army Engineers; widening of the Cape Cod Canal; enclosing the Park River in a conduit through Hartford, Conn.; the Tuscarora Mountain Vehicular Tunnel on the Pennsylvania Turnpike and the Merriman Dam Diversion Tunnel in New York.

During World War II the firm completed many war contracts at the Letterkenny Ordnance Depot in Chambersburg, Pa.; Camp Edwards, Mass.; Camp Ritchie, Md.; Camp Shanks, N. Y.; the Earl Naval Depot, N. J.; Houlton, Maine Air Base and Aberdeen Proving Grounds.

The Perini brothers, while working in the coal belt noticed the similarity between heavy construction operations and the process of strip-mining coal.

The company's large capacity earth-moving equipment was eminently adaptable to coal-stripping operations, and for several years 1,000,000 tons of high-grade coal were produced and marketed annually.

Large Coal Operation

Indicative of the magnitude of the operations, the records show that during this period funds expended to expose, mine, process and market the coal totalled $18,000,000.

In a ten-year period, the Perini brothers, Lou, Charles and Joseph, with top management personnel developed these additional companies: Perini Limited, Toronto; Perini Quebec, Inc., Montreal; Majestic Contractors Ltd.; Bay State Dredging & Contracting (Perini's Marine Division) Ceril-Perini Assoc., Inc.; Perini-Westward Developers Inc., W. Palm Beach, Florida; Perini Pacific and Milwaukee Braves.

In the period 1954-58, the Perini Corporation amassed a record of $500 million of completed construction . . . an average of $100 million per year for five years. In 1958 Perini recorded $90 million of construction both domestic and foreign.

The Perini Corporation employs a labor force of some 8,500 workers, and in addition maintains a permanent staff of 750 people.

The diversification of contracting operations in the construction industry today is reflected in the scope of Perini's operations which now extend from Vermont, New Hampshire, Massachusetts, New York, Pennsylvania, Indiana, Wisconsin, California, Canada, Iran and Australia.

Work Team

During recent years Lou Perini's company has become associated either as a sponsor or as a member of joint ventures with such outstanding names in the construction industry as Walsh, Morrison-Knudsen, Kiewit, Kalser, Utah, Bates & Rogers, Raymond, Arthur Johnson, Macco, General, Tompkins, Mannix, S. J. Groves, Jones, Mills, Blythe Brothers and Johnson and Drake & Piper.

Some of the projects completed or under completion in these joint ventures are the Delaware Aqueduct Tunnel, $44 million; Downsville Dam Core Wall, $13 million; Squirrel Hill Vehicular Tunnel in Pittsburgh, $20 million; Hultman Water Tunnel in Boston, $10 million; Jim Woodruff Dam, Florida, $25 million; Toronto Subway, $15 million.

Also, the Clark Hill Dam, Georgia, $26 million; Fairless Steel Works, Morrisville, Pa., $70 million; Sir Adam Beck Water Tunnels, Niagara Falls, Ontario, $45 million; Chief Joseph Power House, $40 million; Garrison Dam Power House, $10 million; Long Sault Dam, St. Lawrence Seaway, $26 million, Barnhart Island Power Plant, St. Lawrence Seaway, $36 million; Power house and pressure tunnel, Peribonka River, Quebec, $63 million; Dam and water tunnel, New South Wales, Australia, $56 1/4 million; Metropolitan Water Tunnel, Clinton to Marlboro, Mass., $16 million.

The building division of the corporation has built almost every kind of structure since 1946. The lastest venture of the organization is the $350 million West Palm Beach Westward Expansion project in Florida.

$15 Million for Equipment

In the process of construction of all types the Perini Corporation expenditure for all kinds of material for one year was $50 million. A construction contractor like Perini, whose work extends from coast to coast and three separate continents requires a wide variety of construction equipment. Because of the many different types of jobs, the Perini Corporation has invested more than $15 million in over 3,750 pieces of equipment of all types.

In 1957 the organization purchased $7 1/2 million of equipment and in 1958 over $1 1/2 million went into additional equipment. Charles Perini, vice-president in charge of equipment administers this vast inventory of machinery, its distribution and maintenance.

The Perini Corporation has been written about in a number of the leading trade publications. The latest story on the organization appeared in the January edition of Construction Methods and Equipment magazine.

Louis Perini makes his home in Wellesley, Mass., with his wife, the former Miss Florence Gardetto. They have seven children. Mr. and Mrs. Joseph and Elda Perini have six children, and Mr. and Mrs. Charles and Audrea Perini have four children.

Louis Perini has been a director of the Children's Cancer Research Foundation (the Jimmy Fund) since 1948. He is also on the Board of Directors of the Canadian Cancer Society at Toronto, and a member of the executive committee of the Massachusetts Committee of Catholics, Protestants and Jews, a group promoting racial and religious understanding. In 1953 St. Anselm's College awarded him an honorary degree of Doctor of Laws in recognition of his outstanding humanitarianism and distinguished community service.

The Perini brothers also are owners of the Milwaukee Braves. Louis, in 1943, had taken over the Boston Braves with two other Boston contractors and was named president of the organization. Nine years later the Perini brothers gained full control of the club. In 1953 the brothers moved the Braves to Milwaukee.

Pettine Urges Enactment Of Strong Obscenity Laws

PROVIDENCE, R. I. Grand Orator Raymond J. Pettine of the Rhode Island Order in a recent speech here urged enactment of strong obscenity laws to stamp out what he described as "cheap literature."

Pettine, assistant attorney general of Rhode Island and a member of OSIA NEWS Committee, said that easily accessible sex magazines are "one of the malignant forces," contributing to juvenile delinquency.

Brother Pettine quoted J. Edgar Hoover, Sen. Estes Kefauver and other leaders to show that their influence on teenagers is no exaggeration.

Both parents and the state have great responsibility in the matter of cheap magazines and the state, Mr. Pettine said, can assume its responsibility by enacting strong obscenity laws. "And," he added, "it's no more foolish to say you can't legislate morals than it is to say you can't legislate against larceny or murder."

"Would you oppose laws prohibiting the sale of liquor to a 16-year-old?" the speaker asked. "Would you hesitate to give a youngster a fully loaded gun? And yet would you debate the issue when you realize the law is aimed at preventing great harm, the destruction of the thinking and morals of a teenager?"

"How can a community honestly feel it is a democracy if it ignores the moral standards of its children?" Mr. Pettine also asked. "Democracy, with all its individual rights, freedom, safeguards, can mean nothing if we destroy the morals of our youth."
